SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 6, 1863.

PARLIAMENTARY RECORD.

The Senators did not meet on Friday, so the Deputies had the Hall to themselves.

Sr. Uriburu took his seat, and read the approval of the last day's business.

There was a very good attendance in the house, as it was known the Subsidy Bill had to be passed. Unluckily, however, some of the unfortunate national creditors had also selected this day for sending in their accounts.

Sr. Velez opened the proceedings by calling attention to the very important subject before the house - the subsidies (e laugh). He moved, therefore, that the house consider the project; all those in favour of the motion to stand up.

Every man in the place was at once on his legs, even the black porter of the ante-sala. We were surprised that even Sr. Uriburu himself did not get up.

Then the order of the day was to see what new matters had come in—a project for granting a miserable pittance (not a pension) of 50 per month to the widow of the murdered Aberastain.

Sr. Montes de Oca urged that this trifling sum was due to one who had lost so much in the cause of liberty.

Sr. Zavaleta moved that the question be then and there discussed.

An argument ensued on the subject. It was urged that if all the widows of Argentines murdered in the cause of liberty were to be pensioned, the Finance Office might shut up.

The moment the question of the day—THE SUBSIDIES.

Sr. Zavalia called attention to the reasons offered in the President's note.

The project to pay was put and carried, then it was discussed in detail.

Sr. Ruiz Moreno astounded the house by saying that he would oppose the project (great sensation) and that he thought it was unconstitutional—for he believed that everything the Provincial Governments were asked to vote for, the National Government should disburse—but that he thought a quarter of a million dollars (good Heavens!) and he would, therefore, move that it be 20 or 30 p. S of the Customs be set apart for subsidies.

Sr. Zavalia opposed Sr. Moreno and denied that there was any legal obligation whatever on the National Government: that it was only done as a sort of charity.

Sr. Castillo agreed with Sr. Moreno, and was about to translate the opinions of the Standard on the subject, when the project was at once put to the vote, and, as a matter of course, approved.

The pittance question was again brought up. Sr. Velez moved that instead of $50 it should be $100 for Mrs. Aberastain. Put and carried.

Now ensued an amusing scene, every one was turning round and looking at every body. It appeared that the house was scrutinising the place to see if any of the ministers were present, in order to take up the budget, but they were not to be found.

The House then decided for a few minutes: they had hardly resumed their seats, when the unpleasant part of the work began.

1st. came a petition of Dn. Tomas Rojo, praying that he be paid for some cows and bullocks which the National Executive had consumed.

Decree.

When an opportunity occurs, let the petitioner apply in the proper quarter.

2d. A petition of Messrs Schlo Guthert and Co. of the like nature.

Decree, same as above.

3d. A petition of Dn. Pargo, on behalf of Mr. J. Rumajo, for a small account.

Decree.

Let the petitioner apply where he ought.

Sr. Moreno thought that there decrees were very improper, for although he Government might not be able to pay, they could at least recognise them.

Sr. Gorostiaga spoke to the question.

Sr. Velez supported the decrees proposed by the committee, and thought it the proper way to deal with such troublesome claims.

Another petition was presented on behalf of a lady named Susan Colome, or cattle, which the army of liberators consumed.

Decree.

Let this lady apply for the price of her cattle in the proper quarter.

Hereupon a rather serious dispute arose, but after a prolonged argument the decrees as proposed by the commission passed.

The decimal system was next brought up, but it was late, and people were thinking of the Foyer system.

The house adjourned.

TEA-TABLE TALK.

This, gentle reader, is the 500th number of the first English daily paper in Spanish America. We are not yet so old as our Chinese colleague, who lately celebrated his 1600th anniversary; but we doubt not when the Standard shall hold its centenary festival. In 1961, the editor of the future day, will recur with veneration to the lines we now trace, and regard the two years of our infancy as the most eventful of a chequered career. Formerly the British population might be said to suffer the "Mal de 7 dias," being for a while without Zeloso Inspectors, at the breakfast-table, native papers' fall of revolution, feuilleton, and stale jokes. The evil might have continued for 20 years longer, but that we set ourself at once to remove it: strange enough at first, English residents either saw not this want, or doubted their own ability to support a daily paper. Acting on the Clockmaker's plan, the 'Standard' sought the familiarity of the domestic circle, and gradually became, pleasing —useful—indispensable; for it is an undoubted fact, that the coffee seems better made, when our messenger is late in his punctential visit.

Since Monday, we have not heard of any ball, although our dancing 'eronists' being laid-up with a sprained ancle, such things may have taken place without our knowledge. What parties are becoming fashionable; private theatricals are on the wane; amateur concerts still prevail. We learn that the Club Teutonia will give a musical exhibition on Wednesday evening, 21st inst.; invitations will be confined to foreigners indiscriminately, and as gentlemanly will join the German vocalists in sing ing "Vaterland," or the "Rhine de Lorelei." A similar entertainment will come off shortly at the Scotch school. The Circo Progreso Ball, on the 10th, in commemoration of the siege of 1853, and the battle of Pavon, will be a brilliant affair. How many a gallant youth will lay siege to some female heart on that occasion, and perhaps, like Urquiza, be compelled to abandon the game, unless the garrison surrender at discretion, or capitulate with the honours of war. How many a fellow hope, like the Italian legion at Pavon, will cast their destiny on the hazard of a die, and "throw Horace" (ace, ace), and flee at first sight, are undone—"Faint heart ne'er won fair lady," but we are digressing, this is a "ball" will be treated of.

Marriages, like American flour, are very dull on the market; in fact there is no speculation going on. On Friday evening two carriages in front of the College attracted, as was only a christening, but as soon learned, the familiar will of "compadre pe.ado," gratefully uttered by the juvenile neighbours, as the coppers fell on the pavement. Now suppose generally place births before marriages, but this is a mistake; we must not confound cause and effect.

In Judicial matters nothing to add about trees, to our last report. It is fashionable for ladies to open accounts current in Bank, and one manager declares that female depositors have wonderfully increased last month. It is fashionable for some native ladies to. have their flounces, of bombazine, cut straight from the columns, making them give a point of admiration for crowds of gaping fops: this is very repulsive to the eye, and a full-stop should be put to such practices. It is fashionable for fashionable ones to go to law, for on so the propos terance of the Saint Simonians' offices under the Cabildo: it may be selfish at times, causing a pleo, entering a rejoinder, moving for nonsuit, making an appearance, marking judgment, taxing cost, shewing cause, and getting a verdict in the end. Law is the shortest thing in the world, for it only takes at all generations to understand it, and the longest existence, and we will be the latter she seldom forgets to retain.

Literature for female taste is scarce, at present. The British Library has received Kinglake's Crimea, for which there are a dozen applicants: we hope to see also the poems of Byron, and Ackard's "Notes on La Plata." Messrs. Tuckern have sold all their copies of Buckle's essays: one of which entitled "Women as influencing human knowledge" is a philosophical and philological gem. Les Miserables of V. Hugo has been quite eclipsed by Alex. Dumas's Life of Christ, the first edition, 15,000 being exhausted on its first appearance. The author is a renegade priest who after a dissolute life of forged truths, rivalling Gibbon in cruelty and infidelity. Mme. George Sand has applied for the Academy, but he admitted in the Academie de France, the highest literary society of the age: this is in accordance with our own ideas of the consumption. Here let it be noted that Buckle says "women are deeper observers than men," and we are rather disappointed that no lady correspondent claims a professional space in our columns. In remarks of public interest we will ever accept their anonymous contributions. Has any principal reader failed in detecting servants, is a decided benefit to mistresses, by affording them a certain check on cooks, coachmen, and housemaids. Has a pass-book in the hands of the nation, age, and condition of the owner, who is also obliged to produce written and signed testimonials or certificate of conduct. Such pass-book comprises 10 pages of stamped paper, and if any employer give an unjust character to any one they may be fined for a month's wages as penalty, before the Juez de Paz. Up the other hand, if a dishonest lady have a good character, the same penalty should be inflicted by a legal action against the signer of fast certificate. Servants without pass-books cannot recover wages by law.

House keeping items have not changed much of late: marketting is rising in price, good fresh butter cannot be had under a dollar, ib. at the golden figure of $35, three-dozen to a tarity, hawkers retail bad oranges and worse potatoes, coals have gone up $20 a ton, but luckily the cold weather is almost gone, and even milk No. 1. (double price) turned sour last Wednesday. Sickness is prevalent among children: we hear of many families completely victimised with scarlatina, and in one school over a dozen cases. Happily all passed off, very few deaths. Disease is hardly ever fatal in B. Ayres. Some families are already thinking of moving out to the camp, or suburbs; and this is absolutely necessary.

Politics look rather gloomy. September is an eventful month for Buenos Ayres. In September, 1853, raising the siege of Buenos Ayres. In September, the Arroyo Medio; in September, 1861, the battle of Pavon; in September, 1862, election of President Mitre. Can we hope that September may bring us: but vague rumours are afloat, of the projected formation of Entre Rios and Corrientes into a separate republic, or their annexation to the Banda Oriental. We have frequently observed the great influence of the Banda Oriental in our politics, and they do not get up a manifestation of sympathy for the gallant Polos. In every part of Europe female associations are now forming for the assistance of the unfortunate and afflicted nation: why not them in Buenos Ayres?

The widow of Dr. Aberastain has been decreed a pension of $1000 silver per annum. The ex-governoress of Entre Rios, Mrs. Urquiza, is also having exposed the most disgraceful Argentine journalist of the day, Snr. Calvo.

We are happy to perceive the successful exertions of Mr. Mulhall, Mario, in favor of the prisoners of Los Playas: it is a pity they were not in time to save the unfortunate 300 who left Buenos Ayres, on the 4th inst. Would it not be well for President Mitre to send the wrecked survivors to their homes, in Cordoba? instead of detaining them as prisoners of war.

Next Tuesday will be the feast of the Nativity of the B. Virgin, a strict holyday. Little business will be done on Monday, some of our friends intend "justificating" until Wednesday, and really these hot days in town are very unpleasant. There will be a grand ceremony at Santa Domingo on the 8th.

The wants of an Opera Co. is much felt: Rossi and Ferlotti, have left the city retirit from M. Video, and Festa, ando is expected soon from Rio with a new Co.

Bad Policy.

It would require very little to prove, to the satisfaction of our readers, that the views of the 'Tribuna,' on every public topic, are always at variance not only with the sound principles of strict morality, but also with the welfare and prosperity of Buenos Ayres.

When the question arose about consolidating Buenos Ayres, the 'Tribuna' opposed it. Twelve months' experience has proved the utter fallacy of 'Tribuna' ideas on this subject.

When the Flores' invasion took place, the 'Tribuna' looked on and laughed at all misgivings as to the injurious effects on this republic. Yet we will now see what troubles it has brought on us.

This same paper now opposes the best scheme which has been yet laid before Congress, and with unparalleled effrontery asserts that if the public interests are to be considered, it must be rejected. Need we say the objections which the Tribuna offers to the Baron Maua's plan are frivolous and contemptible, need we tell our readers that clouded under the most insidious superficialities this assertion is made, not for the purpose of protesting the interests of the country, but with the scoundrelous object of injuring the fortunes of these articles.

We apprehend that the funded debt of the Argentine Republic is as sacred at home as abroad, and whether held in London or Tucuman, must be paid when matured.

We apprehend that the payment of interest and amortization in London is the principal reason why we support the securities, and we also believe that introduced in this manner on the London market, the credit of the Argentine Republic will rapidly be known, under favourable circumstances. We have no doubt there are thousands in this city who would be glad if our late secretary himself went over to England he could negotiate a loan of millions and millions, but there are others who do not think that he is not possessed of influence at home or abroad, the better.

Could we see any color of justice in this paper's extreme anxiety at present displayed by these sister publications, the Nacional and Tribuna, we could at once discover the real objections to the Baron Maua's plan. It is a fact beneficial for the nation and its creditors that the project be carried out ergo the Tribuna opposes it.

It is to be regretted that a paper which enjoys such extensive circulation should labour so incessantly the wrong way. should use its influence for the propagation of pernicious principles, and false doctrines, should preach the most subversive principles, and constantly labour to persuade the people that what's right is wrong, and what's wrong is right.

It speaks badly for the morals of a people where such papers enjoy popularity, where such editors enjoy patronage.

To raise to its proper standard the drooping credit of this country. To encourage by the flow of capital the capital towards us—to afford an easy method for the redemption of our paper currency, and last, but not the least, to insensibly bring on the London market a class of securities, which in the very country from which they emanate, are all held unsaleable—and can hardly be sold at a discount of 70 per cent. of their par value. These are the praiseworthy objects of the Baron Maua's plan, but as it is to the interests of the country are to be consulted," the 'tribuna' has the effrontery to say it will have nothing to do with it.

Every sentence, every line, every word of this act de of the 'Tribuna,' is the most irrefragable proof of the infamous policy of this paper. We say—" Why does not the Baron, who is a rich banker, buy up these securities, and sell them again in London?" sell them again in London at par with his own guarantee." If the Baron Maua were guilty of the same price-fixing as those who pursued the articles in question, he would be capable of attempting such a thing, but influenced by the high and honorable motives which always govern his conduct, he will not only work more at, than all the subscribers in the Argentine Republic

The bad, stupid policy of the 'Tribuna' is evident to every one, as we have stated, else we shall have the Argentine nation, as it has been for the last 20 years, a prey to all sorts of anarchy, and the victim of unprincipled politicians.

FLORES NEWS.

According to the 'Reforma' Flores will not fight Moreno, he has fled again to some unknown part of the Banda Oriental.

The statement in the 'Tribuna' respecting the Brazilian authorities siding with Flores is altogether false. All the Brazilian authorities which were on the frontier line have been removed, and new ones put in their place. Brazil would fight to the last in defence of the lawful authorities of Banda Oriental, and has a mortal hatred to all revolutionists.

Urquiza it is said, has already made all his arrangements. In Montevideo it is well known what these are, but in Buenos Ayres, people are mute on the subject.

The Holy Alliance was nothing to the new River State Alliance, which is so openly talked of on the sister shores.

It is said that more than 500 men have already passed over from Entre Rios to fight against Flores, and that Bartolino Urquiza openly asserts he will not lay down his arms until he chases back Flores and Co. to Buenos Ayres Lunoln and Nadal are enlisting Entre Rianos, fast.

General Lamas has bought the steamer Cerceo for 300 ounces, and is about to run her from side to side, carrying over horses and "peons" from Entre Rios

The Commander of Colonia reports that the Tribunero have for the last four days been under four leagues of that town. The town is well defended by over 200 men, and when Flores approached a flag was run up by the townspeople, with the words inscribed

"We neither give nor take quarter."

Nin Reyes, it is said, will not return until he arranges everything satisfactorily with Paraguay

There is no fighting going on at present, but robbery on a large scale is the order of the day.

THE ROSARIO MAILS.

We have the "Perro-carril" up to the 4th. inst. Rosario is full of refugees from the cold news from the Wheelwright; it seems that gentleman has met with complete success, the concession being very favorably regarded by foreign capitalists. All the necessary funds were forthcoming, as we are told by our colleague, and nothing was wanting but to form a Board of Directors. The rails for 10 miles of the road are being shipped in England, along with the frame-work of the bridge to be erected at the end of the section now completed. The works of the 2nd section are in progress.

News from the Interior is not very flattering. Catamarca is in a ferment, and Governor Maubecin very much disliked. Tabada's last excursion, with 800 men, cost $900 dollars, and in fact, pacification is a most expensive item in these countries. News from Tucuman reports that the Governor of Catamarca has instituted a drum-head court martial to try any persons inimical to his rule. This is contrary to the Constitution, b t the Governor is nothing although the townspeople be strung up in the name of the law. Lucas Llanos is held prisoner by Moyano's division. Governor Achaval was also taken prisoner by Colonel Cordoba, and taken to Catamarca. The brigands Aguero and Lleando were surprised and put to flight, a place called Balcon. Another named Lantan Lleun, was taken and shot. The rest of the provinces were comparatively quiet. Tucuman is thought to be for Bolivia, but some regard the news "too good to be true." Ontiveros, his famous lieutenant, was taken and shot.

The Vermejo Explorers.

We are very rejoiced to read the following letter from Dr. Germany :—

The steamer Gran Chicoo arrived at Colonia on the 6th inst., having on board Captain Lavarello, Mate, Bela, second Mate Mr. Hyde, Indian Commissioner; three passengers [two of them friars], and a crew of 12 men. He has brought down a large collection of iron, doleft, yerba, glass ware. This the navigation of the Vermejo is now accomplished fact, and communica tion with Salta direct open for the rich merchandise is exceedingly welcome, and the town made it a day of public festivity, to receive the guests of exploration.

The enterprise has proved a most profitable speculation, and Captain Lavarello has received the thanks and benefit on the provinces of Tucuman, Salta, Jujuy, and on Bolivia. This will open up and develop the country, and those places in a wonderful degree.

Hotel Criticisms.

To the Editor of the Standard.

Dear Sir—Arriving here from the camp in the beginning of the week where I had been various occasions of the internal working of the 'Grand Hotel de la Paix,' I determined to give it a call and see how those there, consisting of a bed and sitting room. My wife was with me, consequently a sofa was most requisite, and the duty of the servants of the hotel was to bring a room clean, and fit at all times to receive visitors. I had great difficulty in getting attendance, and when at length it came, everything was hurried over and nothing done properly. In consequence I determined to leave it, and on Thursday afternoon, paying my bill I began to have my luggage removed to another hotel. I must tell you, by my bill I was charged until the Friday morning, and, by a more coincidence, I happened to remonstrate with the hotel keeper, when he said I was at liberty to call and pay there Thursday night. On returning to the hotel for another load of my luggage, I was accosted by Mr. Vincent, I presume, who, with an astonishing smile, told me he had just placed another family in my room, though my wife was still there, engaged packing up, and plenty of luggage.

Sir, I must not let the natural politeness of his native race, as, without asking my wife's permission, or giving her any warning, so easily took it upon herself, and I must thank for having in the politest manner, apologised to me for such an unwarrantable intrusion. I must add that it has never been my luck to meet with such downright impudence from a hotel keeper in any part of the world I have been in ; and should you, Mr. Editor, think fit to place this in your columns, I trust it may show to the public that, however grand in appearance the Hotel de la Paix may be outwardly, still that the inside work holds good—that "it is not all gold that glitters."

I am your obedient servant,

AN ENGLISHMAN.

The Late Duke of Hamilton.

The mortal remains of the late Duke of Hamilton have been removed from Algiers on their way to Scotland. At twelve on Friday night the Hotchkiss funeral service was read over the body at the Hotel de Breteil, in the presence of the Duke's family and friends of the deceased, at present in Paris. After the ceremony, the leaden coffin containing the body was placed in an oaken one and conveyed by the Western Railway terminus in a hearse belonging to the Pompes Funebres, and drawn by four horses belonging to the Emperor's stables. Two aides-de-camp, mounting the eldest sons of the deceased and several high personages, followed the hearse. The last-named two the duke's remains left Paris by the train for Cherbourg, where they arrived the day after about noon. They were received by the prefect and the authorities, who accompanied the body in the procession, with the band of the 18th of the line playing a funeral dirge, and a large crowd of people forming the escort. The body was carried, amidst the sound of artillery, on board the Dauphin, Prince Napoleon's government steam corvette, which was in waiting to carry it to Glasgow, from which port it is to be conveyed to Hamilton for interment. The Duke's son is still at the Palace of St. Cloud. In the evening the profound affliction her court is edured by the attentive attentions of the Empress.—Galignani.

France.

The military establishment of France has been thrown into a state of unusual activity by the orders received to concentrate to place on the full war footing and fit for immediate service three batteries of twelve pounders and 100 artillery waggons. It is understood that similar preparations will be made for the support of the cavalry and infantry divisions, and that the requisite number of rolled hoop-pounders will be supplied from the arsenals of Metz, Strasbourg, and Lille. The attention naturally excited by an activity so unusual at a settling event are three great preparations being made? It is not possible to discover the secrets of the royal mind, and the motives of a skilled counsel of action all manner of rumours are in circulation. It is boasted that the French army is in a condition for any emergency by the month of July, when the officers think active hostilities will comm nce. War is now looked for as certain. It certainly, a disastrous sensation created in the army by the above orders prove how eager the soldiers are for the renewal of the military spectacles there is an impression that the first blow will be directed against Prussia Others, however, consider that the concentration rumours of military preparations against Russia should also reject the projections of the Emperor's views. It is quite certain that the organisation of so large a military reserve is in contemplation of some under and more important field than that on which Metz is the present centre. Such steps as these as possible," "but," says the writer, "when every thing is ready the armament complete, and the cannon and muskets may take it for granted that the blow will follow the word with lightning rapidity."

State Prisoners.

Mr. L. A. Maloney, formerly editor in Iowa, more recently an inmate of the Capitol prison at Washington, has just published a graphic account of that prison and of his fellow prisoners in it. The most interesting of them is the famous Belle Boyd, daughter of a Presbyterian clergyman at Martinsburg, and sister of a Lieut. Colonel, now in the rebel army. She United States Minister to France. She is a young lady of about 19 years of age, of little body, and of pleasing though not beautiful countenance, to be strategy" it seems the surprise of Jackson's surprise of General Banks in the valley of the Shenandoah so entirely due. Belle conceived the idea of playing the part of Delilah, and invited him, with the Federal officers to a ball to come off in a few days. Meantime she secretly started off one night on a fleet horse to the camp of Jackson, 60 miles distant, when she informed him of her plans and of the situation and numbers of the Federal force. She rode back on the day—190 miles in 24 hours—and none knew she was absent. On the night of the ball Belle lavis ed her blandishments on General Banks. She had procured an elegant Scotch flag, with which she covered the person of the General, and by her familiarity made him oblivious to all else than the attentions of his fair entertainer. Meantime Jackson, with his "foot cavalry," made such rapid marches that he was enabled to pounce upon the camp of Banks, throw it into confusion and panic, and cause a speedy retreat to Harper's Ferry. The effect of that disaster upon the whole campaign in Virginia—preventing McDowell's at Fredericksburg and preventing its reinforcement of McClellan—is well known. Subsequently to this Miss Boyd proceeded to Washington, and, procuring a pass, crossed the Potomac, and was detected in the act of making a drawing of the fortifications. She was arrested and imprisoned as a spy, and the first evening after Mahony's arrival he heard her sing "My Maryland" in an adjoining room. She sang at all hours, night and day, in defiance of the guard, who would order her to be silent, to which her reply was "I shan't do it," and then she would repeat the line—Hurra! she spurns the Northern scum! and, suiting the action to the word, she would seize a broom and apply it to the part of the floor trodden by the guard. According to Mr. Mahony's account, this person was a frightful type of filth, disease and torture. He says his own bed was two feet too short for him, and he volunteered in his dominication of the War Department as for continuing a woman in such a place. The writer gives sketches of the other prisoners, which will repay perusal. He claims for many of them, as he does for himself, that they were disloyal to their to ward nor thought; that they were never charged with any offence, and were released at last without knowing the cause of their imprisonment. As for himself, he had in October 1861, offered to raise a regiment of Irishmen to sustain the general Government, though he was of opinion the war was unnecessary and unwise; but he is now wholly a peace man, being opposed to the war as it is conducted, and thinks it can never result in the restoration of the Union.—New York Herald.

The Invasion of the Crimea.

By Wm. Alexander Kinglake.

It is indeed in portraying character that Mr. Kinglake has put forth his full strength. In another part of this Magazine we have given his cool and merciless dissection of the character of the Emperor of the French. Following this comes a minute description of the plot of the "coup d'état," written in a tone of scornful severity like that which Sallust describes the conspiracy of Catoline. Still more vivid than the portraiture of Napoleon is that of St. Arnaud, "formerly Le Roy," the French Commander in the Crimea. Vain, ambitious, dissipated, and unscrupulous; yet with a wonderful power of self-mastery when the occasion demanded, he entered the French army twice and twice left it with discredit, if not in disgrace; he entered it a third time as Lieutenant, at the age of forty was sent to Algeria, where the fierce old Bugeaud soon discovered the serviceable character of the man, and advanced him rapidly. In 1845 he learned that a large body of Arabs had taken refuge in a cave; of these eleven came out and surrendered; St. Arnaud alone knew that five hundred were remained behind; then he determined to kill, and say nothing about it. He wrote so his brother, "I had all the apertures hermetically stopped up. I made one vast sepulchre. One can go into the caverns. No one but myself knew that under there were five hundred brigands who will never again slaughter Frenchmen. A commission of report has told all to the Marshal, without terrible poesy or imagery. No one is so good as I am to fight and by nature; but my conscience does not reproach me. I have done my duty as a commander, and to-morrow I would do the same over again; but I have taken a disgust to Africa." Six weeks after this transaction Mr. Kinglake was tiding by the side of the Emperor, and was making with his force a five weeks' tour into the desert, to wreak vengeance upon a revolted tribe. As he looked upon the keen, handsome, eager features of the Frenchman, heard the clear incisive words in which he described the mechanism of the "heavenly column" under his command, and saw the delight with which he managed his Arab charger, the English visitor little dreamed of the secret of the suffocating half a thousand men which the gay Frenchman bore in his heart. Still he did he imagine that this dashing 'Colonel of a few years to be the man chosen out of all the army to fill the post Minister of War, when the great conspiracy of the coup d'état required a man alike bold-secret, and unscrupulous.

ON CHANGE.

September 5.

This was a very busy day on change The Bolsa was crowded: brokers, merchants, and bankers were all seemed occupied. Ounces opened at 446, and ran down to-day as fast as they went up yesterday. At twelve o'clock they were 442 1/2 at half-past 2welve, 443 1/2; at one o'clock, 444 1/2; at half-past one, 443 1/2; at two o'clock, 442 1/2. Cash sales, 10,822.

The cash sales to-day were unusually heavy, and many asserted that the market had lost not some 4000 ounces, which were immediately thrown on the market. Whether from this cause, or the rumour of Ontiveros's death, we cannot say, but certain it is the ounce market was weak, with a decided downward tendency.

The 'Tribuna's' notions on finance caused a good deal of amusement on the Bolsa. Every one was laughing at the sub-secretary's financial ideas, and his moonshine opposition to the Baron Mauá's project. Varela has completely outdone Cobler.

As yet no contracts have been made for the new wool, although we are told that there are orders to purchase from Rosas, but no sellers.

As a sign of the times we may mention that one of the largest saladeros in Barracas has been just sold to a dealer in pigs for the sum of $56,000 m/c. Jerked beef is in good demand now, when nearly all the saladeros in the country are shut up, and the price is high and extremely high. In Exchange we have nothing to notice, the present rate being 66.

The Bank burns $,160,000 paper dollars on Wednesday, which it is thought will have a beneficial effect on the price of doubloons. Paper money still rules easy, and gold is not to say scarce. The season is fast approaching when paper money will be in great demand, then will be felt the fifty millions which have been consigned to the Bank.
